Sometimes I hear songs in my head that are so complicated that I can’t even write or play what I hear.

My job is to bring music to life for those who need or desire to hear it.

I write music to get my point across to other people when I don’t have words.

Richard Rejino
Top: Tiger and Lewis by Richard Rejino

The Museum of Making Music is a division of the NAMM Foundation, a 501(c)3 nonprofit institution.

You are invited to

Please join us in celebrating the opening of our newest exhibition

6:30pm Friday, December 12, 2014

VIEW THE EXHIBITION Inspired by author, photographer and musician Richard Rejino, this unique exhibition combines Rejino’s photographs with personal testimonials documenting the profound impact music-making has had on individuals at various stages in their lives. ADD YOUR VOICE Reflect on what music means to you, and be among the first to leave your own testimonial in the exhibition space. LEARN ABOUT THE PROJECT Rejino will talk about his work to raise public awareness of the benefits of music in education and in our lives. He will be joined by special guests who have participated in his initiative. ENJOY A PERFORMANCE Lewis Warren Jr, an accomplished and inspired young pianist, will perform. His gift has brought many opportunities, including an appearance on NBC’s America’s Got Talent, as well as participation in Rejino’s project.

MEMBERS FREE / $15 NONMEMBERS
Wine and scrumptious desserts will be served

Please RSVP / purchase tickets at museumofmakingmusic.org or 760-304-5844